Harald Ebhardt studied Medicine at the Universities of Jena, Johannesburg and Stellenbosch and graduated in 1997. He obtained a PhD in Forensic Pathology from the University of Jena in 2000. In 2003 he was appointed as Lecturer in Oral Pathology at the Charité University Hospital Berlin and became a Consultant Histopathologist in 2007. He received further training in oral pathology at the University College London Hospitals in 2008. Later that year he founded the Centre of Oral Pathology in Potsdam, which operates as a private practice and is an unparalleled institution as there is at present no legal possibility for dentists to specialize in oral pathology in Germany. He still has tight connections to research groups at the Charité University Hospital Berlin and contributes with his lab to PhD-projects, of which three were successfully completed in recent years. His student textbook “Spezielle Pathologie fuer Zahnmediziner” was published as 2nd edition in April 2018.
